Just as always, we are following CDC guidance for preventing the spread of illness, the foremost being hand washing, keeping staff home when sick and following precautions when working with clients who are sick. Home Instead CAREGivers also receive specific training on reducing the risk of illness that we continue to revisit and reemphasize with our professional CAREGiver team. Caring for seniors in our community is what we do, and we continue to be committed to working with our partners who share the same important mission.	The most important thing for Home Instead is making sure our communities are aware that we are still take care of senior clients. If there is a family with a senior loved one, the safest place for that senior is in their home and we can provide a level of home care that will keep that family member safe.	Our office staff is currently working remotely but we are open for business and our CAREGivers are still providing the best care to our current clients.	The best thing we can do to support each other during this incredibly challenging time is to stay strong, stay safe and keep in touch with other local businesses and provide support where needed the most.	Most Important is to stay safe, social distance and we will prevail. The Home Instead Team is thinking about everyone!
